The British Concorde landing at Dulles International Airport at Chantilly, Va., near Washington, yesterday

Two Concordes Open Passenger Runs to Washington

By RICHARD WITKIN
Special to The New York Times
CHANTILLY, Va., May 24—In and France, their Concorde flights from New York, legal conflict over noise, and trans-Atlantic super-service today to Washington, their destination of second flights from London and in early afternoon, Euro-time, two of the 1,350-hour Concorde arrived at Dulles International Airport here just before noon after flights of a little under four hours.

The travel time to Dulles, which is about 26 miles west of Washington, halved the schedule for conventional subsonic jets.

The 100-passenger British and French planes carried 75 and 80 passengers, respectively, most of them paying customers but some of them official guests. The craft are routinely leaving 20 to 25 seats unsold so extra fuel can be carried on the Europe-to-Washington runs. Trips to New York would be 200 miles shorter.

The Federal Aviation Administration said its noise-measuring equipment a mile short of the landing point showed both Concorde to have been quieter than a Boeing 707 monitored in the same period. The Air France craft was quieter than a medium-range Boeing 727 but the British Airways plane was louder.

Tomorrow, when the planes make their return flights, will be a more significant environmental test. In the past, sound equipment has measured the SST's at considerably higher noise levels on takeoff than other airliners.

Dulles took on something of the atmosphere of Cape Canaveral.

De Sapio and Fitzgerald Plead Not Guilty to Lying

By TOM GOLDSTEIN
Carmine G. De Sapio, the former Tammany Hall leader, pleaded not guilty yesterday to a charge that he had lied to a special grand jury investigating how information of a confidential investigation by Maurice H. Nadjari's office had been divulged to targets of the investigation.

Specifically Mr. De Sapio was accused of perjury when he testified that he had never sent a "messenger" last December to tell Thomas I. Fitzgerald, Manhattan's public administrator, "to go up and see" Mr. De Sapio.

The identity of the messenger, who was described as a public official, was not disclosed in the indictment.

In a second indictment, Mr. Fitzgerald was charged with three counts of perjury and three of criminal contempt.

He, too, pleaded not guilty before Justice Leonard H. Sandler in State Supreme Court, who presides over cases developed by Mr. Nadjari, the special state prosecutor in charge of prosecuting corruption in the city's criminal justice system.

"It's a typical Nadjari perjury indictment, with little or no substance," said Mr. Fitzgerald.

'Death With Dignity' Move Delayed in Quinlan Case

By JOSEPH F. SULLIVAN
Special to The New York Times
MORRISTOWN, N.J., May 24—The ability of Karen Anne Quinlan to breathe without a mechanical respirator has temporarily halted efforts to allow her to die "with dignity," in line with ruling by the New Jersey Supreme Court, and could force the case back into court, according to people close to the case.

It may take other steps—like withholding the high calorie food formulas and the antibiotics that are sustaining the young woman—to set the stage for her death.

The attending physicians and St. Clare's Hospital, where Miss Quinlan has been a patient for more than a year, have indicated they are unwilling to take those steps.

For this reason, the family has already conferred with other medical facility and other physicians, according to the sources. However, it is unlikely that any medical decisions affecting the 22-year-old woman will be made outside the guidelines set down by the state high court.

There is general agreement that Miss Quinlan suffered irreversible brain damage because of a lack of oxygen when she passed out after ingesting a combination of tranquilizers and alcoholic beverages at a party.

A spokesman for William F. Hyland, the State Attorney General, said today that his office and that of the Morris County

ESTIMATE BOARD VOTES A BUDGET OF $125 BILLION

Expense Provisions Adopted Along With $1.48 Billion for Capital Outlays

By EDWARD RANZAL
Under constraints imposed on it by Albany and Washington, the Board of Estimate last night passed a $12.5 billion expense budget, the most austere in the city's history, by a vote of 16 to 6.

While the Estimate Board was taking this action, the City Council, which also must pass a budget, was split and unable to act, principally because a group of councilmen refused to vote for a budget unless it included funds to keep open three city hospitals and a family-care center that had been ordered closed by the Health and Hospitals Corporation.

An hour later, at 10:45 P.M., the Board of Estimate unanimously passed a $1.48 billion capital or construction budget for the fiscal year starting July 1.

The members indicated they were pleased with last-minute changes that had been agreed on in the Mayor's capital budget that would fund various projects in their boroughs.

Moon's Sect Pushes Pro-Seoul Activities

By ANN CRITTENDEN
A number of individuals and financial and military support organizations connected with the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the wealthy Korean industrialist and evangelist, have intimate ties with and have received assistance from the South Korean Government and the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, according to former Korean and American officials and former members of the Moon organization.

At the same time, the fast-growing Moon-affiliated groups have devoted much of their efforts to building support for the South Korean Government in the United States. These efforts have taken the form of intensive lobbying on Capitol Hill, attempts to influence prominent politicians, businessmen and community leaders, the development of a dedicated group of followers from many countries who have pledged to fight in South Korea in the event of a war there and elaborate public relations campaigns attacking Communism and linking South Korea to patriotic American themes.

119 New York Delegates, In Switch, Endorse Ford

Shift From Uncommitted Status Swells the President's Lead Over Reagan on Eve of Six Crucial Primaries

By FRANK LYNN
Special to The New York Times
ALBANY, May 24—In a move to bolster President Ford on the eve of six crucial primaries, 119 New York Republican delegates, or 77 percent of the state delegation, voted today to endorse the President.

The move gave Mr. Ford a 156-delegate lead over his Republican challenger, Ronald Reagan, the former California Governor. The lead is probably large enough to enable the President to stay in front despite the possible loss of five of the six primaries tomorrow.

With 1,130 Republican delegate votes required for the Presidential nomination at the party convention in Kansas City next August, the tally after the New York move was:

Ford 695
Reagan 539

High Court Bars State Restraints ON DRUG PRICE ADS

7-1 Ruling Gives Free Speech Right to Pharmacies in Victory for Consumers

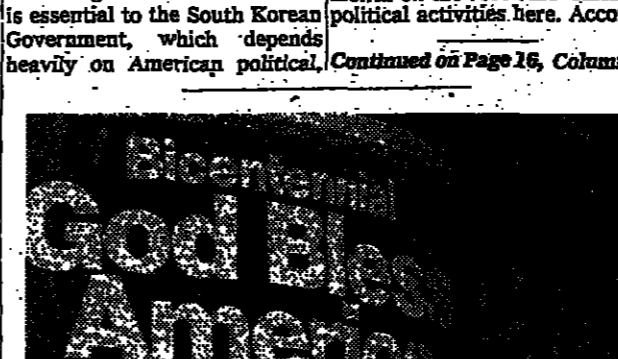

By LESLEY OELSNER
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, May 24—The Supreme Court ruled 7 to 1 today that states may not forbid pharmacists from advertising the prices of prescription drugs—a ruling that may save consumers millions of dollars a year.

Free Flow Indispensable

The Court based its ruling largely on the need of both individual consumers and society at large for the information that comes through advertising.

"Advertising, however tasteless and excessive it sometimes may seem, is nonetheless dissemination of information as to who is producing and selling what product, for what reason, and at what price. So long as we preserve a predominantly free enterprise economy, the allocation of our resources in large measure will be made through numerous private economic decisions. It is a matter of public interest that those decisions, in the aggregate, be intelligent and well informed. To this end, the free flow of economic information is indispensable."

Always a Socialist, Says
Guyana Prime Minister

By JONATHAN KANDELL
Special to The New York Times

GEORGETOWN, Guyana, May 19—Back in 1964, when "destabilization" was not part of the English lexicon and cloak-and-dagger operations still had a romantic ring, the provisional Government of Dr. Cheddi Jagan was toppled in the wake of strikes and riots covertly encouraged by American and British intelligence services.

Reports About Cuban Base
"Perhaps it is just that I have an ability to concentrate on one objective at a time. In the early sixties, my priority was to gain independence for Guyana, and I was against any activity or posture that tended to delay that objective. But I was always a socialist, and I said so back in a speech I made in 1955."

Today, Mr. Burnham, a tall, robust man who looks a decade younger than his 53 years, is worried about the destabilization of his own Government.

Angolan Leader Pledges Nonalignment

By MARVINE HOWE
Special to The New York Times

LUANDA, Angola, May 24—President Agostinho Neto asserted today that his country would be politically independent, regardless of aid received.

Speech Is Conciliatory
President Neto gave the guidelines of foreign and domestic policy in an address to 240 graduates of the first national seminar for political activists.

Official sources emphasized that this meant an alliance to build socialism and that Angola firmly maintained its policy of national independence and non-alignment.

Describing Angola's socialist aims, Mr. Neto emphasized that the land must be property of the society, not the state, as in East European countries. He also said there was room for the individual in agriculture, although preference would be given to collective enterprises.

SWEDES SAY CUBANS ARE ANGOLA BUFFER

STOCKHOLM, May 24—Swedish officials believe that the 12,000 Cuban troops who fought on the side of the victorious Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola are now protecting its leader, Agostinho Neto, from falling under direct Soviet control.

The officials said that Prime Minister Olof Palme, during talks today with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, had reported on recent contacts between the Swedish Social Democratic party and Mr. Neto. Mr. Palme heads the party.

The Prime Minister is said to consider Cuban troops who are still in Angola as a buffer between Mr. Neto and more radical elements of his movement that favor closer ties with the Soviet Union.

Moscow supported and supplied the movement in its struggle with two rival nationalist groups in the civil war in the West African country. The official American view of the Cuban troops there is that they were basically mercenaries hired by the Russians.

The Swedish officials said they believed that Prime Minister Fidel Castro has claims of his own on leadership of national liberation movements in Africa and Latin America.

Neither Mr. Kissinger nor Mr. Palme commented publicly on the exchange today, but Mr. Kissinger said that "Sweden's position as a neutral country gives us possibilities to communicate with other countries in a way that we cannot."

GUERRILLAS BLOW UP A TRAIN IN RHODESIA

Archbishop of Hanoi Among 20 New Cardinals Installed by F

By ALVIN SHUSTER
Special to The New York Times

ROME, May 24—Pope Paul VI today installed 20 new cardinals, including the Archbishop of Hanoi, whose selection had been kept secret until the ceremony.

In the new Hall of Audiences behind St. Peter's Square, the Pope placed red birettas on the heads of the new cardinals and gave a special welcome to the Vietnamese, Joseph Marie Cardinal Trin Nhu Kme. The 78-year-old Pontiff, who had remained seated as the other 19 cardinals knelt before him during the ceremony, rose to his feet as the 20th, the Vietnamese, climbed the steps to the papal throne.

The Pope opened his arms in greeting and the 6,000 invited guests in the hall joined in loud applause. The 76-year-old Vietnamese cardinal, who arrived in Rome late last night, was dressed in purple bishop's vestments because he did not have time to obtain the red robes worn by the others.

The name of Hanoi's archbishop was not among the cardinals whose appointment was announced a month ago. He was one of two whose appointments were not disclosed, but kept by the Pope "in pectore," or secret. The Vatican has sometimes used this practice in the past in appointing cardinals from Communist countries.

Vatican sources, who would not disclose the name of the second secret cardinal, said the announcement of the elevation of the Vietnamese came only after he had been assured of a visa to come to the ceremony. The Vatican has no diplomatic relations with Hanoi and often has worked through French channels.

A Second Figure In British Scandal Retracts His Story

Special to The New York Times

LONDON, May 24—A second prop in the sex and politics scandal that has been raging in the British press was knocked away yesterday.

Andre Thorne, 20 years old, said in a sworn statement published by The Sunday People, a mass-circulation tabloid, that his story that he had a pornographic movie in which a prominent politician appeared was all lies.

Also untrue, he confessed, was his charge that an official of the South African Embassy here had tried to get the film. The diplomat, Johan Russouw, a second Secretary, has just returned to South Africa because the embassy said he had been hounded by British press.

The Guardian, a highly reputable newspaper, has been leading the press in its investigation of possible dirty tricks by South African organizations to discredit Britain's Liberal Party.

Unanswered Questions
Today that paper said Mr. Thorne's confession left many questions unanswered. The editor, Peter Preston, said, "We have not seen the end of this by any means."

Mr. Thorne said he had concocted the story to "make trouble for politicians." While printing it, The Sunday People said there could be "no guarantee that he is telling the truth now."

The first prop in the scandal disintegrated when the British Broadcasting Corporation's "exposure" on television of South African involvement turned out to be a hoax.

The BBC brought on a man described as Lieut. Col. Frederick Cheeseman who told of seeing dossiers on leading Liberal politicians when he went to Pretoria for a job with the Bureau of State Security.

Mr. Cheeseman, who has a criminal record and who never rose beyond the rank of sergeant, soon confessed that he was a fake.

Two Officers Are Wounded In a Londonderry Ambush

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, May 24 (AP)—Two gunmen ambushed and shot a 19-year-old reserve policeman and a policeman on foot patrol in Londonderry last night, authorities reported.

They said that the unarmed policeman was in critical condition with gunshot wounds in the head but that other officer was less seriously hurt.

According to the police, the two gunmen waited in a dark doorway until the patrol passed by and then stepped out and opened fire point-blank. The incident happened in the Waterside district, a mixed area of Roman Catholics and Protestants.

The authorities said that the injured policeman's father, also a reserve officer, was killed in January 1974 not far from the scene of the shooting last night.

Some close to the Vatican also suggested that it hoped the selection of Cardinal Trin Nhu Kme would serve as a signal to Hanoi of the church's continuing interest in the plight of Roman Catholics in North and South Vietnam. Vatican officials have previously indicated their concern over the many Catholics who remained in the South after the Communist takeover of Saigon a year ago.

In any event, the announcement of the appointment was greeted with enthusiasm by the crowd in the great hall. A small and frail man, the Vietnamese cardinal showed no emotion.

After the Pope placed the birettas, or four-cornered hats, on each of the new cardinals, they bowed and then walked over to greet the other members of the Sacred College of Cardinals.

The formalities, which included a secret papal consistory before the public ceremony, brought to 120 the number of cardinals under 80 years of age and thus eligible to elect the next pope. Although Italians still form the largest single national group among the cardinals, their proportion has been shrinking. This has generated speculation about the possibility of the election one day of a non-Italian pope.

Among those installed today were William Wakefield Cardinal Baum, who has headed the Washington archdiocese since 1973, and Laszlo Cardinal Szelecsenyi, who has been Archbishop of Esztergom, the seat of the church in Hungary. Four cardinals were from Latin America and four from Africa.

Addressing the secret consistory this morning, the first since 1973, the Pope delivered an unusually direct attack on those who have challenged the church, mentioning one critic by name in a rare departure from papal practice. He said the traditionalists on the right and the liberals on the left were providing him with "reasons for sorrow."

In particular, he mentioned the Rev. Marcel Lefebvre, a French bishop who now lives in Switzerland and who leads those who do not recognize the validity of the Second Vatican Council. The council, an assembly of 2,300 bishops, met from 1962 to 1965 and moved the church into a period of innovation, including changes to allow mass to be said in local languages.

"Discredit is cast upon the authority of the church in the name of tradition, to which respect is professed only materially and verbally," said the Pope, whose speech was made public after the private meeting. "Today's authority is rejected in the name of yesterday's. And the fact is all the more serious in that the opposition of which we are speaking is not only encouraged by some priests but is led by a prelate, Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, who nevertheless still has our respect."

He noted that those on the right were saying that Vatican II was not binding and that "one has the duty to disobey in order to preserve certain traditions."

"What traditions?" the Pope asked. "Is it for this group, not the Pope, not the College of Bishops, not the Ecumenical Council, to decide which among the innumerable traditions must be considered as the norm of faith?"

In criticizing liberals on the left, the Pope said the church could not accept "those who believe themselves authorized to create their own liturgy." He again indirectly criticized Italian Catholics who are for Parliament on the right Party slate in national elections.

The Pope said he did not accept the attitude who substitute for it teaching ideologies sent "antithetical do" situations, propounding linking of two irreconcilable worlds. The church view that Max Christianity are incorporated into the Vatican officials' secret consistory also accepted the es three new saints but the dates for these would be announced three new saints w Olgive, a Scottish; blessed Sarbelous; Lebanese Maronite the blessed Beatrix Meneses, a Spanish

Kissinger in Sweden: Vietnam Echoes

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY
 STOCKHOLM, May 24—The Indochina war, which deeply chilled relations between the United States and Sweden from 1972 to 1974, was on the minds of many people during Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's visit to Sweden today. Yesterday, before he flew into Stockholm, 13,000 protesters gathered downtown under a brilliant blue sky and chanted "Kissinger murderer" in earlier demonstrations, at the height of the war, the man who is now Sweden's Prime Minister, Olof Palme, joined the protesters in the streets.

Today, a Swedish reporter asked Mr. Kissinger at a news conference if the time had not come to declare the war an American mistake. Mr. Kissinger said, "50,000 Americans were killed in Vietnam, and it is a very painful experience for many Americans. Successive administrations, wisely or not, thought they were serving a good cause. We may have made mistakes, and in retrospect, grave mistakes were made."

Compensation Question
 Mr. Kissinger was asked today whether the United States would pay compensation to the Vietnamese, as he promised to do in the 1973 peace treaty for which he and the North Vietnamese leader Le Duc Tho, were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. "We are not going to continue re-lighting the Vietnam war," Mr. Kissinger said, "but there is no reason to ask the American people to comply with one provision of a treaty when all the rest of the provisions have been violated by the other side."

"This is not an issue for demonstrations," he added. Today the spotless streets of this rich and stately city were quiet but for the wooden clacking of the clogs most young Swedes wear.

Sweden's neutrality is not an issue even in the campaign for the elections here Sept. 19. After six hours of talks with Mr. Palme last night and today Mr. Kissinger said, "I made it clear to him the United States does not have any objections to the basis of Swedish neutrality policy—we might disagree with this or that application of it."

Outside the Doric portico of the Foreign Ministry, a young couple from the northern town of Umea, Thurg Lundgren and Monica Landstrom, looked at Mr. Kissinger's parked Cadillac. "We have relatives in Minnesota and California," Mr. Lundgren said. "The relationship with them is more important than a Vietnam demonstration." In the late 19th century a fifth of the Swedish population emigrated to the United States.

The foreign policy perspectives of a small Nordic country of eight million people and an American continental power of 200 million, Mr. Kissinger said, "have not always been identical."

In 1972, in sharp reaction to the Swedish Government's open support of Hanoi, the Nixon Administration withdrew its Ambassador, and did not replace him until May 1974. American officials say the main reason for Mr. Kissinger's visit to Stockholm this week, at Mr. Palme's initiative, was to complete the gradual improvement of relations that began about a year ago.

Today Mr. Palme, who opposed United States policy in Angola earlier this year, expressed support for the policy speech Mr. Kissinger made in Lusaka, Zambia, during his trip to Africa earlier this month. In it he pledged American support for black majority rule in such countries as Rhodesia.

"Time is short in Rhodesia," Mr. Palme said, "and Dr. Kissinger's speech in Lusaka was a very important thing."

After lunching with King Carl XVI Gustaf at the Royal Palace and delivering a lecture to the Swedish Institute of International Affairs, Mr. Kissinger had dinner at the Foreign Ministry. One of the guests was his father's brother, Arno Kissinger, who has lived in Sweden since the family fled from the German town of Furch after Hitler came to power.

"I personally have reason to be grateful to the Swedish people for giving refuge to members of my family who were fleeing from totalitarianism," Mr. Kissinger said on his arrival yesterday.

Panel Investigating 70 to 90 New Cases of Suspected Cheating at West Point

By JAMES FERON
Special to The New York Times
WEST POINT, N.Y., May 24—The superintendent of the United States Military Academy, Lieut. Gen. Sidney Berry, said today that a recently appointed internal review panel was investigating 70 to 90 new cases of suspected cheating.

The special investigative board of officers and cadets was appointed by General Berry in response to allegations from many of the 45 cadets already charged with cheating that West Point has been covering up a wider scandal.

Acknowledging that the 174-year-old military academy was going through a "terribly difficult time," General Berry said at a news conference that the honor code remained the "arch-stone of a cadet's values and that it would remain in force although it would continue to undergo modifications." The alleged cheating took place in an electrical engineering examination in March. Of the 117 original suspects discovered through scrutiny of papers within the same company, 101 went before honor boards. Forty-nine were acquitted; four resigned and 48 are awaiting action by appeals boards. Some claim that at least 200 other cadets were involved.

Concession Is Seen
In what appeared to be a major concession to critics of the cadet honor code, General Berry announced that he was appointing Col. Hal Rhyme, the deputy commandant of cadets, to a new post of "special assistant to the Commandant for honor matters." The new position, which is likely to be permanent, will enable Colonel Rhyme to devote full time to "assisting" members of the cadet honor committee in the administration of the code, which states that "a cadet will not lie, cheat or steal, or tolerate those who do."

Academy officials have been reluctant over the years to interfere with what had been a totally cadet-run operation in its crucial initial stages despite allegations that honor committee leaders had used their authority on occasion to "get" cadets in disfavor.

Series of Hearings
Although the honor board is only the first step in a series of hearings using generally recognized judicial procedures, cadets "charged" by the boards with honor violations are widely considered to have been found "guilty" and are treated as such by being separated from their regular companies.

The Commandant of Cadets, Brig. Gen. Walter Ulmer, indicated that procedure inadvertently during a news conference by saying that although Cadet Imothy Ringgold had been "convicted" by an honor board—he was cleared soon after—he would have had the opportunity to "prove his nonguilt" later at an officer hearing.

Asked why anyone should have to "prove their nonguilt," General Ulmer said "it might have been a poor choice of words." He insisted, later, however, that the honor code remained "alive and well" at West Point "despite some flaws."

Some changes had already been made in the administration of the honor code and General Berry's decision to appoint a review panel for the cheating scandal coincided with the opening of a Congressional investigation of the Academy.

Interviewing Cadets
Representative Thomas Downey, a Suffolk County Democrat who is a member of the House Armed Services Committee, began to interview cadets, officers, lawyers and officials at West Point today, even as General Berry and his staff officers were meeting with the press.

Congressman Downey, who said he was investigating both the honor code and the Academy's handling of the cheating scandal on behalf of the military personnel subcommittee, was accompanied by an aide, Fred Kass. They expected to remain at West Point through the week.

"Because of the rigidity of the honor code," Representative Downey said, "cadets are unable to tell the full truth to Academy officials without placing their careers in jeopardy. We will be interviewing them on an anonymous and confidential basis so that we can begin to determine the full extent of the honor problem at the Academy."

Although the cheating scandal has attracted much of the publicity surrounding the Academy in the last seven weeks, it has been the function and administration of the code that has become the focus of wider interest.

General Berry, addressing himself to the broader issue, said the Academy's mission was to develop "top-quality soldier-leaders" from the "widest variables of American society." He said the key link was "integrity" with the "honor system essential to its development." General Berry and his staff stressed the limited cheating at West Point that it might extend to 5 percent of the 4,000 They also tended to dlegations of harassment those expressed by Cn Verr who has been full-time guard-comp after alleged threats on l

In a related development, Sidney Siller, preside New York Criminal C Association, said the tion would soon begg hearings into the lega tion of cadets and i matters at West Point Mr. Siller said, "v like to evaluate the h as it presently affects and his legal rights q

This is the third consecutive APA survey to name American the No. 1 domestic airline.

"If you were traveling to any destination in the U.S., and had your choice of any U.S. airline, which airline would you choose—and why?"

The Airline Passengers Association asked that question of 15,000 of its members, people who averaged more than 35 flights a year.

The results were conclusive: more people chose American than any other airline.

And the reasons were many: schedules, reliability, comfort, courtesy, convenience—and most of all, service.

Being named number one underscores our right to say, "We're American Airlines. Doing what we do best."

But it also gives us the responsibility to go on proving ourselves, day after day and flight after flight.

COURT VOIDS DRUG PRICE CURBS

drug price information" production and control of drugs. However, the Federal Trade Commission suggested last year that the restriction on drug price advertising would save consumers over $300 million a year.

The court, while it did not invalidate the $300 million figure, said that the F.T.C. study had "millions of dollars" of error. According to Mr. Justice, the logic of the ruling is to invalidate laws that prohibit advertising for two other major items: funeral services and eyeglasses.

While the Court majority, by Associate Justice Blackmun specifically, it was expressing "doubt" on the validity of limiting price advertising by lawyers and professional analysts in the decision at least partly applied to these other professions.

The American Bar Association, under pressure of both sides and threatened litigation, its traditional ban on advertising by lawyers, recently permitted its professional members to advertise in the yellow telephone directories. Most state bar groups followed the A.B.A.'s lead.

Justice Warren E. Burger, in a separate opinion, stressed that the Court was "not" saying the doctor and pharmacist "to another day." Burger sought to differentiate between the services by doctors and lawyers, the services provided by pharmacists in dispensing drugs. He said, for instance, that about 95 percent of hospital prescriptions are filled with units already prepared by the manufacturer. "It is clear," he said, "that the pharmacist renders a true service to the patient who sells lawbooks." William H. Rehnquist, a dissenter in the case, said that the Court was "scolding" the doctor and pharmacist today. In deciding the ban on advertising by pharmacists, he said, "the Court necessarily adopts a rule that is not limited merely to the inflation of price alone, but which cannot possibly be applied to pharmacists without extending to lawyers and all other professions."

Rehnquist also suggested that the Court might be "opening the way" for active promotion of cigarettes and liquor.

Limitation on Professions
Justice Rehnquist agreed that the decision could be applied to advertising by other professions. He suggested, however, that it would still be for a state to limit liquor advertising, and that it would be possible for states to limit advertising for these products.

Justice Rehnquist represented the Citizen Litigation Group, headed by Ralph Nader, a consumer activist. The suit, in which the Nader group is named, was filed against the Pharmacy Board by the Citizens Consumer Action Committee, a former council president in B. Jordan, and the American Federation of Teachers and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Justice Rehnquist did not participate in the decision.

On advertising pre-drug prices have been the target of consumer groups for a combination of reasons, including the fact that more money is spent (more than $1 billion in 1970, according to an estimate); the great variation in prices charged for the same drug by different pharmacies; and the fact that many people who use drugs are particularly difficult to reach, particularly the elderly who use more drugs but are less able to shop around for better prices.

The Virginia statute involved in the case provided that a pharmacist's professional conduct could be punished by a fine or loss of license for a pharmacist who advertised the price of prescriptions.

AN U. BACKS GENETIC RESEARCH

LANSING, Mich., May 24 (AP)—A controversial type of genetic research, capable of creating new life forms and potentially dangerous to health, has received approval from the University of Michigan regents.

The regents approved a faculty report Friday that the research should be conducted at the University as long as it is for appropriate scientific purposes.

The regents' action includes approval for more than $1 million to equip three laboratories with security systems to prevent the escape of disease-causing organisms, or deoxyribonucleic acid, which forms the basic unit of heredity. The report's 6-to-1 approval was in favor of the research, in which genes from one species are combined with those of another. The first university to give formal consent to the research was the University of California at Berkeley.

Woman's Drive for Drug-Price Ads Ends Victoriously After 2½ Years

By BEN A. FRANKLIN
Special to The New York Times
RICHMOND, May 24—On the day two and a half years ago that her lawsuit went to trial here, challenging the Virginia State Board of Pharmacy's practice of forbidding druggists to advertise prescription drug prices, Lynn B. Jordan was in the hospital undergoing surgery.

Mrs. Jordan, a 33-year-old suburban Virginia consumer activist—a leader of the 1973 meat boycott, a former vice president of the Consumer Federation of America and former president of the Virginia Citizens Consumer Council—had left her job as a computer programmer for the Navy.

"I gave up a $17,000-a-year job to do consumer work because I thought that was more important," she said. And she soon found, through medicine shopping related to "my problems," that drugs dispensed on doctors' prescriptions were becoming a major—and irritating—part of her life. She had become a steady consumer of prescription drugs.

Her findings as a consumer led her to press for price competition among druggists—a campaign that proved victorious today when the Supreme Court affirmed an earlier ruling favoring such competition.

It was not that the Jordans were destitute. Mrs. Jordan's husband, Donald, is also a Navy computer specialist, and Mrs. Jordan now works part time as a bookkeeper for a friend in Springfield. But prescription prices—or the discrepancies in them—began to afflict her consumer's sense of equity.

A.F.L.-C.I.O. Joins Suit

"A group of us had got together in 1973 and done a prescription drug price survey here in northern Virginia and in Richmond," Mrs. Jordan recalled. The survey showed that one reason the prescription drug business was a $10-billion-a-year industry in the United States was an enormous—and to the Virginia consumerists, unjustified—variation between pharmacies in the prices charged for identical drugs under a system without effective competition.

The price of 25 darvon capsules ranged from $2.35 to $3.65, a difference of 55 per cent. To fill a doctor's prescription for 40 achromycin tablets, a Virginian could pay anywhere from $2.50 to $4.70; a difference of 90 per cent. And for 40 tetracycline tablets—the range was 132 per cent, from $1.68 to $3.90.

Mrs. Jordan, the Virginia consumer group of which she was then president, and the State A.F.L.-C.I.O. joined as plaintiffs in the lawsuit that followed the price survey—and that the United States Supreme Court affirmed today. They went to the United States District Court in Richmond in July 1973, seeking an injunction against the State Board of Pharmacy.

Their lawyer then, and later through the appeal, was Alan B. Morrison, associated with Ralph Hader's so-called litigation group here.

Under a 1968 act of the Virginia Legislature, the Board of Pharmacy had been empowered to declare the state's licensed pharmacists guilty of "unprofessional conduct" if they advertised or promoted prices or discount terms of prescription drugs.

Free-Speech Threat Seen
"Unprofessional conduct" was ground for suspension or denial of a druggist's state license. This indirect foreclosure of prescription drug advertising—upheld in a Federal Court challenge in 1969—was preventing price competition to consumer detriment, the plaintiffs contended.

Their suit charged that the practice, which is also in the statutes or regulations of at least 20 other states, violated the First Amendment's guarantee of free speech. Discount druggists in Virginia who might want to advertise—the unusual case—were not permitted to do so.

Mrs. Jordan said that following her court victory and her own operation—a hysterectomy—she went on a widely prescribed course of premarin, a synthetic hormone.

"We expected all the pharmacies to start advertising like crazy, but almost nothing happened," she said. "Only a couple of druggists even tried it."

"That was because the druggist either feared the competitive price situation, or feared the board," Mrs. Jordan said. "And on the latter they were right, because after 11 months Virginia appealed our decision, and guess who comes into court against the consumer position—the Attorney General of the Commonwealth."

Attorney General Andrew F. Miller, a Democrat, and the Republican he hopes to succeed in the Virginia governorship next year, Mills E. Godwin Jr., agreed on one thing—that advertising prescription prices was "unprofessional." When the Virginia Legislature earlier this year passed a mild law to allow druggists to post prices in their stores—a good bit less than the court allowed today—Governor Godwin vetoed it.

Others Back Consumer
When the consumers' case reached the Supreme Court, they were joined in urging that the lower-court decision be upheld by the Association of National Advertisers and by Osco Drug Inc., a chain of 200 retail drugstores in 17 states.

Osco has been facing charges by the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Pharmacy for advertising prescription drug prices in Boston newspapers. The charges have been held up pending the Court's decision today, and the company now expects them to be dropped.

"The Board of Pharmacy threw out a lot of argument that pharmacists were professionals, not engaged in selling a commodity, and all that jazz," Mrs. Jordan said, savoring her "tremendous victory."

"Actually, nobody likes competition—except us consumers," she said.

People in the airline industry were shocked when TWA advertised better on-time performance than American and United.

No major airline had ever been so competitive.

Well, we think competition is healthy. Competing for your business is what makes our business even better.

For example, we know that being on time is the major concern of business flyers. So TWA has committed itself to being the best on-time airline in the business.

We've now had the best on-time record of the big three for 12 months in a row—right through this March.

Part of the TWA New York Team that made the on-time performance record possible.

This claim is based on the percentage of domestic flights actually flown which arrived on time, within 15 minutes of schedule as shown in CAB records. This represents 55% of TWA's available seat miles.

And even though we're ahead, we're still trying. In April TWA had its best month ever in on-time performance. 92% of domestic flights arrived on time, within 15 minutes of schedule.

Competition may be difficult. But it's the driving force behind TWA. It's what's made us the on-time airline.

Being the best isn't everything. It's the only thing.*

Summary of Actions Taken by the United States Supreme Court

Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, May 24—
The Supreme Court took the following actions today:

ANTITRUST

Unanimously reversed a Federal Appeals Court ruling that had affirmed a district court's dismissal of a complaint by one Raleigh, N.C., hospital against another.

The district court had found that the complaint did not allege enough of a connection between the alleged violations of the Sherman Act and interstate commerce. The United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, in affirming, had held that the providing of hospital services was only a "local" activity.

The Supreme Court, however, found that the combination of factors that involved the complaining hospital in interstate commerce—such as receiving a substantial portion of its supplies and medicines from out-of-state, and getting financing from out of state—were enough to establish the "substantial effect" on interstate commerce required by the act.

"The fact that an effect on interstate commerce might be termed indirect because the conduct producing it is not purposely directed toward interstate commerce does not lead to a conclusion that the conduct at issue is outside the scope of the Sherman Act," the Court said. It also noted: "An effect can be substantial under the Sherman Act even if its impact on interstate commerce falls far short of causing enterprises to fold or affecting market price." (Hospital Bldg. Co. v. Rex Hospital Trustees No. 74-1452).

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT

The Court agreed to consider constitutional questions raised by the use by school officials of "severe" corporal punishment to discipline children. Accepting a petition on behalf of two Miami, Fla., boys and their parents who are seeking damages from school officials, the Justices said they would review two questions: Whether infliction of severe corporal punishment, without notice of the charges for which the child is being punished and without an opportunity to be heard, violates the due process clause of the 14th Amendment; and whether severe corporal punishment violates the Eighth Amendment ban against cruel and unusual punishment.

The two boys each contend among other things that they had to take pain-killing medication after being paddled. (Ingraham v. Wright, No. 75-8527).

The Court ruled last October that states may permit school teachers to spank misbehaving students, even over the objections of parents, as long as the teachers use lesser punishment when appropriate and also give the children some procedural safeguards. In that case, however, the Court issued no opinion, and acted without having heard arguments on the question. It merely affirmed, without comment, the decision of a lower Federal court that had considered the matter. The Court's reliance on the "summary affirmance" procedure has elicited some strong criticism from within the legal community this year.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT

The Court agreed to review five cases involving alleged civil rights violations that raise questions about seniority systems that were left unanswered by the Court's ruling earlier this year, in Franks v. Bowman, that blacks and others who were denied jobs in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 must be awarded retroactive seniority once they succeed in getting those jobs. (Internal Brotherhood of Teamsters v. United States, No. 75-636; T.L.M.E.-DC Inc. v. United States, No. 75-672; Teamsters Local Union 857 v. Rodriguez, No. 75-631; Southern Conference of Teamsters v. Rodriguez, No. 75-715; East Texas Motor Freight System Inc. v. Rodriguez, No. 75-718).

The Court vacated the lower court's ruling in a sixth case involving Title VII of the Civil Rights Act and seniority systems, Equal Employment Opportunity Comm'n. v. Jersey Central Power & Light Co., No. 75-182, and sent it back for "further consideration in light of" the Franks ruling. It declined to review several other similar cases, apparently on the ground that the lower court rulings, or portions of rulings being appealed, did not conflict with its own ruling in Franks. (Waters v. Wis. Steel Works of Internal Harvester Co. No. 74-1064; United Order of American Bricklayers v. Waters, No. 74-1350; Local 862 Intern. Union Etc. v. Ford Motor Co. No. 74-1349; Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. Equal Employment Opportunity Comm., No. 74-465).

FREE SPEECH

By 7-to-1 vote, the Court ruled that states may not forbid pharmacists from advertising the prices of prescription drugs and that even "purely commercial" advertising is entitled to some protection from state interference under the First Amendment's free speech guarantee. Justice William H. Rehnquist dissented; Justice John Paul Stevens, who was not on the Court when the case was argued, did not participate. (Va. Pharmacy Bd. v. Va. Consumer Council, No. 74-805).

PRIVACY

Over the dissents of Justices William J. Brennan, Jr. and Potter Stewart, the Court declined to review a lower appeals court ruling permitting a privacy suit against Time magazine to proceed in the lower court.

Time has wanted the high court to determine the standard of constitutional protection under the First Amendment for truthful public disclosure of private facts about a person. (Time Inc. v. Virgil, No. 75-1174).

SOCIAL SECURITY

The Court ruled that states, in administering federally funded welfare programs that include contraceptive services and counseling, may not impose on minors the condition that access to contraceptive services be denied unless the minor provides written consent from his or her parents. The Court acted in a case from Utah, one of six states with parental consent requirements. (Jones v. T-H, No. 75-824).

The Court did not issue an opinion, or hear arguments on the issue. It merely affirmed, in part, the judgment of the lower Federal court that had first heard the case. The lower court had invalidated the Utah rule on both statutory and constitutional grounds. The Supreme Court, however, affirmed the district court, it said in a brief entry on its orders list, only to the extent that the lower court "invalidated the challenged regulation as inconsistent with the Social Security Act." It did so, the Court said, "without indicating any views on whether the district court's decision on the constitutional issue was sound."

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Rehnquist heard oral argument on the case before deciding it summarily.

JES REJECT MEDIA CASE

11-Million Privacy Suit Time Inc. Stands

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP) — The Supreme Court refused today to consider a case asking whether the news media may disclose truthful facts about a person's private life. The justices let stand a decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in San Francisco refusing to grant a $12 million privacy suit against Time Inc. The court of the Supreme Court is to send the case to a Federal judge to decide whether it should be tried by a jury.

The suit was filed by Michael J. Epstein of Newport Beach, Calif., on the basis of an article in the "Closest Thing to Heaven" which appeared in the May 22, 1971, issue of Time magazine.

The article dealt with the death of the sport of body building including Mr. Virgil. It included incidents in Mr. Virgil's life in which he was seen with an extinguished cigarette in his mouth, deliberately lit in his hands and first down stairs to his.

Amendment Epstein's 11-page article was written by Curtis Kirkpatrick of Time's Illustrated staff. Epstein obtained his information from interviews with Mr. Virgil and his acquaintances. He did not dispute the accuracy of the statements about Virgil, but the article was being checked for that he not be mentioned. He said he had not been going to deal with his life other than his exploits.

The article, which publishes the name of Mr. Virgil, moved for a writ of habeas corpus, that the article was published in violation of the freedom-of-information guarantee in the First Amendment to the Constitu-

States District Judge Thompson Jr. of San Francisco denied the writ, and then appealed to the Ninth Circuit. The court of appeals sent the case to Judge Thompson to decide whether the article has a legitimate interest in the facts disclosed and whether the publicizing of the facts would prove to be a reasonable exercise of ordinary sensibility. The court ruled that if Judge Thompson decided that "reasonable minds could differ" on the issue, the case should be sent to a jury. Time Inc. is asking the Supreme Court to take further action in abeyance.

President's Choice Consumer Unit Selected by Senate

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP) — The Senate rejected today President Ford's nomination of William Byington to the Conduct Safety Commission. The committee decides whether to recommend to the President to kill the nomination or to send it to the Senate. Mr. Byington won an agreement to reconsider his nomination later in the week if the Senate will be in session.

Mr. Byington, a 38-year-old businessman from Rapid Rapids, Mich., was nominated for a 2 1/2-year term. Mr. Byington indicated his intention to resign if the committee had succeeded in killing the nomination. He had earlier attempted to resign to a full seven-year term, but the committee had rejected that Mr. Byington lacked qualifications.

Frank E. Moss, Democrat, led the opposition to Byington and told the committee "he does not have an understanding of the problems facing the commission."

Mr. Byington also said that "if the Senate is to mean anything, it must select nominees carefully."

Senator Robert P. Griffin, Republican of Michigan, said that Mr. Byington had the experience in affairs and the administrative experience.

Griffin said that the nominee had been deputy director of the Department of Health and Welfare Office and had worked with Virginia resident Ford's adviser.

Byington was once a partner of Presidential adviser L. Seidman in a firm and served as assistant secretary to George Romney when he was governor of Michigan.

Business Aid Urged WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP) — A bill to earmark 1 percent of large-federal contracts for minority business enterprises was introduced today by Representative Parren J. Mitchell of Maryland.

CITY, Calif., May 24—Students began their first day of classes since the accident with a moment of silence in memory of the victims.

The Pope's message was transmitted to the community of 15,000 by Bishop Alden J. Bell of Sacramento.

"The Holy Father expressed his deep sadness at the tragic accident claiming the lives of 16 years old, was the victims buried. The Pope also expressed 'grief and solidarity with those who suffer and mourn.'

Investigation Continues

Spencer W. Kimball, president of the Mormon Church, called the Yuba City Mormon Church to convey condolences.

Federal and state investigators, meanwhile, checked the possibility that heavy amounts of carbon monoxide had leaked into the bus before it crashed.

Although one investigator, Jay Golden of the National Transportation Safety Board, said examinations of the shattered bus did not turn up defects that might have caused such a leakage, another Federal investigator, Philip Hogue, said his team of seven specialists would follow up on the possibility.

Mr. Hogue said it was "unlikely" that the bus was leaking carbon monoxide before it crashed.

Investigators waited to question the bus driver, Evan Prothero, 50, who was critically injured.

Four Concerns Seek Pact For East Coast Rail Project

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP)—Four concerns will compete for the $1.75 billion Federal contract to straighten, rebuild and further improve the railroad link between Boston and Washington, Federal officials say.

They are Bechtel Inc., of San Francisco; Corridor Rail Consultants, a Philadelphia-based consortium, and two joint ventures, one headed by DeLeuw, Cather of Washington and the other by Tippetts, Abbott, McCardy Stratton, also of Washington.

They were chosen from 19 competitors and include a total of 62 concerns, some of them among the world's most prominent design and construction companies, the United States Transportation Department says.

The decision of which concern will carry out the massive rebuilding along the 480-mile-of-track is expected to be made in August. It is expected to take 10 year complete.

NASA Calls Weather Pattern Stable on Jupiter

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif., May 24 (UPI)—Jupiter was pictured by the National Space and Aeronautics Administration today as a planet where general weather patterns rarely change.

The agency said that Jupiter's colorful cloud bands and zones flow around the massive planet unchanged for decades and maybe even centuries and some features, such as the Great Red Spot, may last forever.

According to the space agency, most Jupiter specialists now believe that the weather around Jupiter's midsection occurs in a thin skin of atmosphere above a much deeper atmosphere section made up of compressed hydrogen and helium. Below that is a liquid hydrogen interior.

This new, more detailed profile of the fifth planet out from the sun took shape at the opening of a three-day symposium at NASA's Ames Research Center summarizing what is now known about Jupiter. The data

'76 Social Security Deficit Seen Less Than Projected

By EDWIN L. DALE Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 24—The short-run outlook for Social Security financing has brightened a little because of the improving economy, but the system will still run a deficit every year from now on unless revenues are increased, Congress heard today.

The assessment of both the short-run and longer-run outlook for Social Security was made in the annual report of the "trustees" of the system, headed by William E. Simon, Secretary of the Treasury.

Depending on the assumptions used, the Social Security trust fund, which is a kind of cushion against years when outlays exceed income, will be exhausted some time early in the next decade. The fund now has $44 billion and will drop to $40 billion by Dec. 31.

President Ford has proposed that the gap for the next five years be closed by an increase of three-tenths of one percentage point in the Social Security tax rate on both employer and employee, starting next year, but Congress has rejected the proposal. This decision was based largely on their conclusion that there was no immediate emergency.

Because stronger growth in employment and less inflation than seemed likely a year ago, the this year's deficit is estimated at $4.3 billion, compared with the $5.8 billion projected in last year's trustees' report. But it is still a deficit, and it is expected to continue year after year.

but may be controversial in detail.

James B. Cardwell, Commissioner of Social Security, told a news conference that the Administration would send to Congress next month its proposals for solving this problem. These would essentially "freeze" the present ratio of benefits to earnings, which is higher for low income workers than for the better paid. This ratio will start to creep up about 1990 unless the technical flaw in the law is corrected.

Mr. Cardwell indicated that he hoped Congress could act this year to solve this double indexing problem even if it declines to raise the Social Security tax rate.

A separate problem involves the disability part of the system, where the number of beneficiaries has far exceeded projections. The disability trust fund will be exhausted by 1979 unless new means of financing are found. Part of the Social Security tax paid by workers and employers goes to this fund, part to the regular old age and survivors fund and part to the Medicare fund.

'A Matter of Judgment'

Mr. Cardwell said that it was "a matter of judgment" how large a trust fund for Social Security should be maintained and how much it should be allowed to run down. The Administration's aim, he said, is to increase taxes enough so that the trust fund does not sink below an amount equal to one-third of the following year's benefits.

The Social Security and disability funds will pay out this year an estimated total of $78.2 billion in benefits and will receive $73.8 billion in income, a small part of that representing interest on the trust fund "investment" in Treasury securities.

The trustees in their report supported an increase in the Social Security tax to finance the short-term gap rather than use of "general revenues" or a large increase in the maximum "wage base" on which Social Security taxes are levied.

Huge Future Deficit Seen

For the longer run—meaning the next century—a huge deficit emerges, largely because the decline in the country's birth rate will produce a big increase in the number of retired persons relative to those of working age.

About half of this long-run financing gap, the report said, can be covered by a technical change in the law to eliminate an unintended "double indexing" of benefits. This change is not controversial in principle,

Children Die, 2 Saved by Mother in Queens Blaze

URRAY SCHUMACHER reported that a 14-year-old girl died shortly after the fire broke out in a private home in the St. Albans section of Queens.

by flames and smoke as she tried to get back into the building at 172-04 Amitea Road. A neighbor, Regin Ellis, also of 172-04 Amitea Road, who awoke to Mrs. Williams' screams and rushed to help, recalled that the fire had spread into the quiet block of private homes.

despite the heat of the fire, she tried to get back into the building by shoving open a cellar door with a shovel, hoping to get into the building. But the flames were even worse there.

of the fire blew out the windows. He said that the fire had started in the rear of a finished basement, apparently in a bookcase, and had spread up behind the wall into the ceiling, where it smoldered for nearly three hours before erupting into the rooms above.

Neighbors and family members of the Williams family discussing the tragedy in Queens yesterday.

Personal Impact on Neighbors
Residents of this block of middle-class blacks know one another—some have lived there 25 years—and the tragedy has had a very personal impact on them, although Mrs. Williams and her children have lived in the neighborhood, only about a year.

Everybody had known the children. They recalled, for instance, that Donna had always been concerned about her younger brother and sisters. They remembered that on Sunday the children had been busy working on the lawn and the backyard.

Demolition of Part of West Side Highway May Start in September

By EDWARD C. BURKS
Wrecking crews are expected to start tearing down a 17-block section of the dilapidated old structure carrying the West Side Highway in September.

Federal approval of the project would be submitted in July or August. The Federal Highway Administration is being asked to put up 90 percent of the construction cost, estimated at more than $1 billion.

According to Alexander J. Lautner, the city's Transportation Administrator, traffic along the detour around the highway has picked up by 50 percent in the last year—to 47,000 vehicles a day. Mr. Zuccotti said that the Jane Street-to-26th Street stretch was the worst because of the dilapidated structure and because of the heavy traffic on the street below, especially in the 14th Street meat market area.

Environmental opponents have attacked both the Interstate 26th Street and the Queens Boulevard solutions on the ground that either would increase traffic—especially truck traffic—and pollution to an intolerable degree. However, Mr. Zuccotti indicated that the city and state had already talked with Federal Highway officials in detail about the dismantling plan. The Deputy Mayor emphasized that both Mayor Beame and Governor Carey were still "1,000 percent" for Westway. He said: "In terms of the city's development and economic future, Westway and the proposed center have high priority."

A powerful firecracker exploded in a glass-encased cabinet yesterday in the Cliffside Park High School, spraying a hallway with glass shards.

Dr. Edward Siegal, executive vice president of the medical society, said in an interview that there was "absolutely no basis at all" for the charges.

The petition, for example asserts that the advertisement among other things failed to refer to "infamous" and "celebrated" cases of medical malpractice, and that it did not point out that "contingent fees are limited by law to one-third in a recovery or to a sliding scale which limits the fee in a recovery of over $25,000 to 25 percent."

Edward Crooks, 24, overpowered the guard, Sylvester, in an elevator, but Mr. Warner escaped when the door opened at the 12th floor.

John Neeson, a spokesman for Lobenz-Stevens Inc., the public-relations concern that prepared the supplement, defended it as "an extremely well-documented and researched report." He added that there were no plans to reprint it or distribute it further.

Mr. Glaser denied during a news conference at the New York Hilton Hotel that lawyers were up in arms because the legislation posed a threat to a major source of their income.

Mr. Ortiz, for instance, has been volunteering to help repair televisions for a year.

He had already studied television repair, but when lessons became too expensive, he went to the Home Planning Workshop.

Mr. Ortiz had already shown Mr. Corto during a previous visit how to clean the tuning apparatus.

He was given further training, and now he carefully and expertly takes apart televisions as customers watch.

After his inspection he makes a diagnosis. The other day, he told Frank Corto, one of several people clustered around his repair counter, that his television's problem was in the fine tuning.

He reported her death to the police and she was arrested for homicide.

GUNNINGHAM WINS A DELAY IN COURT

Ruling Postpones Nadjari's Efforts to Study Records

Patrick J. Cunningham, the Democratic state chairman, won a delay yesterday in yielding records of his law firm to Maurice H. Nadjari, the special state prosecutor.

The Appellate Division of State Supreme Court, First Department, granted the delay and ordered a hearing tomorrow before Judge Irving Kaufman.

This matter is believed to have involved the city's leasing of the Bronx Terminal Market to a company represented by Mr. Cunningham's firm and Joseph A. Brust, a retired Supreme Court justice, who was indicted on perjury charges last February.

By CLIVE BARNES

It is not so much the depth of George Balanchine that impresses—but he can certainly be deep—but the breadth. Probably no choreographer in history had had quite this man's extraordinary range—a range engendered perhaps by his journeying from St. Petersburg to New York, via Paris, London and Copenhagen.

It opened with "Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 2," which is the oblique, factual and unobtrusive name the company nowadays gives to that great Maryinsky tribute that used to be called, in the good old days, "Ballet Imperial."

Pope-Hennessy Joining Met Museum

By GRACE GLEUCE
The Metropolitan Museum of Art, without a chairman of its key department of European paintings for more than a year, has appointed the distinguished British art historian, Sir John Pope-Hennessy, to the post.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art Sir John Pope-Hennessy

The 63-year-old recruit would make recommendations in five specific areas, Mr. Hoving said: "the collections themselves; the layout of the new paintings galleries; the high-level staffing of the department; publications, and education and training." The director added, "I am confident he will fulfill these functions with the same excellence with which he's carried out his entire career."

Yesterday, at his home in London, Sir John, whose reputation as a stern pillar of the art establishment is belied, according to colleagues, by his wit and openness to new ideas, said he was "very happy" about his move to New York. "I've had a long-standing relationship with both the Institute and the Metropolitan, and I look forward with great enthusiasm to a new relationship with them," he said.

Amiram Rigai in Uneven Piano Recital

By DONAL HENAHAN
There are pianists who play so adeptly and with such evident love of their instrument that a listener finds it difficult to concentrate on the music.

kind of keyboard command is not heard every day, and Mr. Rigai's success in handling the Schumann was only partly diminished by his decision to play a truncated version. Many repeats were omitted, according to no discernible plan, and the optional five posthumous etudes also were bypassed.

The Israeli pianist's tone was full, and given added richness by generous use of the sustaining pedal. His grasp of musical structure and his fidelity to the score also were well above average. But speed and technique spoke so loudly that the substance of the Schumann could not be heard.

Three works by Jacques Miller and five by Goitchev rounded out a recital that rarely dug below the skin. The Miller trio included a premiere, "A Profile," which was otherwise unexplained, but which may well have been a Gershwin sketch. The two other Miller pieces, exuberantly Mendelssohn-like, received Mr. Rigai's speed treatment and the Goitchev group also stressed, quite properly in this case, a kind of brilliant superficiality.

The Museum of the City of New York is opening its new Toy Collection, over 2,000 items ranging from whimsical to scientific and assembled some 50 years ago by E. Some six years ago, Al Capp began matching the pop artists at their own game, putting his famous "Li'l Abner" characters in a new, updated framework of acrylics on large canvases and showing his Dogpatch denizens as a political and social commentary on today's scene.

Antitakeover Statutes Spurred

By ROBERT MEITZ

Alarm over the wave of corporate takeover efforts has accelerated efforts by states to protect their jobs and shareholders.

A number of states have enacted statutes to halt or at least delay takeover attempts. New York is on the verge of doing so.

A Delaware statute that went into effect May 1 adds a third route to the two basic avenues taken by states that passed laws earlier.

Delaware has chosen a non-administrative approach that seeks only to delay takeovers so that offers can be weighed without pressure. The two other courses are administrative hearings for disclosure of all pertinent facts and hearings for such disclosure plus consideration of the fairness of offers.

The Delaware statute is admired by those who prefer simplicity over administrative involvement and by those who believe delay is adequate to prevent a corporate takeover that may be against shareholders' interests.

Essentially, the Delaware statute requires the bidder to give management of the target company 20 days' notice and then requires a 20-day tender period during which shareholders can make their decisions.

balance sheet and income statement for the last three years must be set forth. The theory is that shareholders will need to know whether the prospective major shareholder is strong financially.

Those who favor the Delaware approach argue that it provides a sufficient delay for management to consider alternatives and enough time for the company to locate a merger partner more to its liking—usually with a higher price. It also calms feelings and allows management time to persuade shareholders to sit tight.

Under the Delaware statute, disgruntled managements would have to go to court.

New York's legislation, still subject to amendment, calls for administrative hearings to test whether there has been full, fair and effective disclosure. The State Attorney General would hear complaints under the statute. Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz is on record as favoring the legislation as a "potent weapon" against pirating of local industry.

New York's disclosure requirement resembles that of Ohio, one of the first states to pass anti-takeover laws. Passage of the Ohio law is believed to have been spurred by the takeover several years ago of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company by what is now the Lykes-Youngstown Corporation.

The third approach is the most rigorous from the point of view of the company seeking to takeover. This approach, embodied in statutes enacted by Wisconsin and Minnesota, requires that administrative hearings go beyond mere disclosure considerations and test the fairness of the offer itself. Under these statutes, the state would step in and prevent any takeover determined to be unfair or inequitable.

In view of the considerable number of attempts to take over important companies and the desire of the states to protect local industry, the race to pass takeover legislation is expected to pick up speed. There is also the possibility that states will move to strengthen existing statutes when they prove inadequate to prevent the flight of local industry.

The thrust of the statute is not to save local industry — most corporations based in Delaware have their principal plants elsewhere — but to make sure the shareholder gets a fair opportunity to weigh the plan.

Under the Delaware statute the offer would, of course, have to meet Federal disclosure requirements.

Pertinent information, to be revealed to the target company's management from the outset, includes the name and address of the offering company, information about its directors and officers, types of securities to be purchased and the terms of the purchase.

The bidder must disclose any conditions affecting the offer, the number of shares of the target company that have already been purchased and any options to buy other outstanding shares.

If the bidder seeks less than 100 percent of the target, copies of the former's

The broadcasting industry is sounding off.

The broadcasting industry is experiencing unprecedented demand for its services. The first quarter 1976 produced excellent profits. And we see these profits continuing throughout this year and in the years ahead.

Biennial elections will accelerate the demand for broadcast time. So will the elections. And the forthcoming Olympics. Corporate advertising is also increasing.

Our expectation calls for a 12% increase in total television revenues for 1976 followed by a 10% gain in 1977. Our long term forecast indicates a 9%-10% increase.

BANCA NAZIONALE DEL LAVORO 1975

After hearing reports by the Managing Director and Chief Executive, Prof. Alberto Ferrari, and by the Board of Auditors, the Board of Directors of the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro approved at its meeting of April 29, 1975, the annual report of the bank.

After a short description of the uncertain business environment within which the bank was called upon to operate last year and of the main monetary trends in Italy and abroad, the report stresses that the policy of the BNL-group was mainly directed last year towards financing economic recovery at home, as well as expanding the financial activity of the bank in international markets though within the limits set by strict liquidity requirements.

Deposits from clients and correspondents at the end of 1975 were 15 dollars 21.1 billion or 24 per cent over 1974. Loans and discounts at US dollars 14.3 billion showed an expansion of 22 per cent. The total of facilities granted, including contingent liabilities of US dollars 2,714 million, reached a figure of US dollars 17,095 million, an increase of 24 per cent over December 1974. Securities held in the bank's own portfolio (including treasury bills) reached US dollars 4,576 million, about US dollars 1,463 million more than a year earlier. The bank's balance sheet total amounted at the end of 1975 to US dollars 44,581 million.

Profits for the year were US dollars 26.4 million. The policy of the bank was to hold down the cost of borrowing by clients compared with the previous year. On the other hand, earnings from trading activities were notably increased.

The bank continued to lend its preferential support at home and abroad in favour of the export drive of the Italian business community. The ties of co-operation with the European banks, members of ABECOR (Associated Banks of Europe) as well as with other leading foreign banks, were strengthened, especially within the framework of such international banking groups as BSFE (Banque De La Societe Financiere Europeenne), EULABANK (Euro-Latin American Bank Limited) and AEFC (Australian European Finance Corporation Limited).

MAIN DATA FROM BALANCE SHEET (in millions of U.S. Dollars) ASSETS: Cash 3,788, Securities 4,376, Loans to Customers and Correspondents 14,381. LIABILITIES: Capital and surplus 856, Deposits 21,154, Balance Sheet total 44,581.

BNL's foreign network was further expanded. Our Tehran Representative Office is now in full operation. The planned establishment of a Representative Office in Chicago will be a worthy addition to our US network, which consists of our New York Branch and the Los Angeles Representative Office. Our Branches in London, Madrid and New York have had a year-of active and profitable business, as also our subsidiaries in Zurich and Caracas.

results of Open Market Committee meetings made these points: The summaries will normal-

The summaries will be more complete than before in describing the views and analyses expressed at the meeting, but the members expressing various views will not be named unless they vote against the final monetary policy directive. The fuller account of each meeting known as the memorandum of discussion, now published with a lag of five years, will be discontinued.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and of the Open Market Committee, told a news conference that these fuller minutes, once made public after five years, had not been "consulted with any frequency" by the news media or by scholars and had "not proved very useful."

A Federal district court judge has ruled that this must be done under the Freedom of Information Act, but his decision has been stayed until the matter is decided by the Court of Appeals.

In a year when the severity of world economic conditions rendered the operations of banking institutions more complex than ever, Credito Italiano, one of Italy's major banks, had a significant place in the nation's economy and international relations.

While all of Credito Italiano's activities in Italy expanded notably in 1975, the Bank enhanced its presence on international monetary markets by taking timely advantage of the trends and developments in trade and financial operations.

Net profit for the year amounted to Lit. 7,829,324,066. The general Shareholders Meeting therefore approved assigning of Lit. 2,500 million to reserves which now total Lit. 23,000 million, and also authorized the distribution of a 12 percent dividend of Lit. 60 for each Lit. 500 par value share.

and did not represent a bribe to anyone, the company said. Two divisions of the S.E.C. which were not identified, made recommendations about whether Du Pont's payments should be disclosed. One of the said objections should be raised if they were not, but the other said the commission should not object "in order to be consistent" with the position taken in another case, that of Celanese. The commission decided not to require disclosure. Celanese, the study said, made a number of questionable payments, none of which was required to be disclosed. They included $72,400 over five years in illegal political contributions, commercial bribery and kickbacks; $12,600 annually to customs inspectors and other government officials; $777,000 in under-reported income to employees; and direct and indirect violations of exchange controls averaging $1.4 million a year. Both Du Pont and Celanese have announced that investigations turned up no payments that need be disclosed. Court Upholds U.S.-Florida Accord

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP)—The Supreme Court approved today an agreement between the Federal Government and the State of Florida regarding offshore rights, including valuable oil leasing rights, in the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico. The agreement settles details stemming from a decision of the court on March 17, 1975, which in general affirmed the dominance of the Federal Government over the ocean bed more than three miles from shore. At that time, the court directed a senior United States circuit judge, Albert B. Maris, of Philadelphia, who had been appointed a special master in the case, to give further consideration to some objections raised by Federal authorities to his original report. He had recommended recognition of part of Florida Bay as a historic bay and recognition of the Dry Tortugas as inland waters, thus extending the coastline from which the limit of state offshore jurisdiction would be measured. After hearing further evidence, Judge Maris concluded that there was no historic bay between the upper Florida Keys and the Florida mainland and that the narrow waters were territorial seas. The Federal-Florida agreement incorporated this finding. In general it provides for a three-mile limit on the Atlantic Coast and a limit of three marine leagues on the Gulf Coast.

Research and Development Rising

American business concerns will spend 10 percent more on research and development this year than last, according to the McGraw-Hill Publications Company. The company's economics department, in its annual survey, said the business community would spend $26.8 billion on research and development in 1976. By 1979, the survey predicted, annual expenditure should rise to $31.4 billion. McGraw-Hill's chief economist, Douglas Greenwald, said that with the lessening of inflation pressure, this year's would be the "first real growth" in research and development since the mid 1960's. Of the total $26.8 billion to be spent, $24.8 billion will be spent by manufacturing industries, with more than half earmarked for improvement of existing products.

Dollar Sags Slightly Overseas

BRUSSELS, May 24 (UPI)—The dollar, although setting slightly, today retained most of last week's strength over European money markets. The British pound staged a small recovery. The price of gold fell $1.10 in Zurich to close at $124.95 an ounce and drifted $1 lower in London to $124.875 on what dealers described as small offerings. The price of gold has been in a gradual decline since it dropped below $130 an ounce on March 29. The Bank of England's increase of the minimum lending rate to 11 percent pulled the pound up from Friday's low closing of $1.78075 to $1.7845 in London. But in Zurich the pound fell from 4.4528 Swiss francs to a new low of 4.4183, and in Frankfurt it went down from 4.6120 German marks to 4.61. The dollar closed in Frankfurt at 2.5780 German marks, down from 2.5870. It was marked down in Zurich from 2.4955 to 2.4713 Swiss francs and in Paris from 4.7340 to 4.7275 French francs.

NAIROBI, Kenya, Tuesday,

May 25 (AP)—Rich and poor nations, facing failure after three weeks of bargaining on how to share the world's wealth, sent their disputes to a negotiating panel early today in an effort to reach agreement.

Diplomatic observers were skeptical of the outcome and said a major political setback appeared near in the two-year, United Nations-sponsored campaign to restructure the global economy.

Today's resolution made Mr. Wakasa the second Japanese to face legal action in the scandal, following Yoshio Kodama, a right wing lobbyist and Lockheed's secret sales agent in Japan.

Mr. Kodama has been indicted on charges of income tax evasion and violation of Japan's foreign currency control law.

DOW DROPS 19.22, CLOSING AT 971.53

Continued From Page 47. In a sense, the stock market yesterday was belatedly following the fixed-income sector, where prices fell and short-term rates climbed Friday to their highest levels of 1976. This climb in yields, accompanied by declining prices, took place during the last four weeks. It reflected a push toward higher money-market rates by the Federal Reserve as a result of big recent gains in the nation's money supply. Oddly enough, bond prices moved slightly higher yesterday. For more than three months, the industrial average has held within a narrow band. Its closing low during this period was 968.28—some 3 points below yesterday's finish—on April 9. With investors becoming increasingly jittery over the rise in short-term rates, the forecast yesterday morning by a leading banker served further to undermine confidence on Wall Street. In London, Donald C. Platten, chairman of the Chemical New York Corporation and its main subsidiary, the Chemical Bank, predicted that the prime lending rate of commercial banks would climb to 8 percent, "give or take a quarter-point," by the end of the year. The prime, or basic lending rate, now stands at its cyclical low of 6 1/2 percent on an industry-wide basis. Despite yesterday's sell-off, some individual issues performed well. Marquette, a major cement producer, rose 2 1/2 to 12 1/2 after reaching a merger agreement with Gulf & Western. As for Gulf & Western, it dipped 1/2 to 23 1/2, after directors approved a 5-for-4 stock split and stated that the cash dividend would be raised. Book-of-the-Month gained 1 1/2 to 30 1/2, bringing its total advance to more than 3 points in the last two trading days, following board approval of a 50 percent stock dividend and

Credit Markets Regaining Stability

Continued From Page 47. from the money market yesterday, but so were many other fixed-income traders and investors. The inactivity seemed the credit market's most pronounced characteristic. Against this background, the Treasury auctioned three-month Treasury bills at an average discount rate of 5.493 percent, up from 5.250 percent last week and the highest level for these short-term securities since they were sold at 5.633 percent on Dec. 8. Six-month Treasury bills went at a 5.908 percent average rate, up from 5.726 percent last week and the highest since they were sold at 5.914 percent on Dec. 15. "Dealers are very conscious that they have three bill sales this week and a four-day week next week thrown in for spice," one Government securities dealer commented as he talked of the rise in Treasury bill rates yesterday. Tomorrow, the Government will sell 52-week bills and Friday it will sell three-month and six-month bills. It would normally sell next Monday, a day the market was closed for Memorial Day. Shortly after 3 P.M., Wall Street wires carried the story confirming that the central bank had voted at its Open Market Committee meeting April 20 to "tolerate some modest firming in money-market conditions in order to restrain growth in the nation's money supply." The report, as one corporate treasurer expressed it, was "an increase in the cash dividend. William G. Garrison, who heads an investment advisory concern, said that "people are overestimating the importance of the short-term swing" in interest rates. "The economic recovery is slowing," he added, "and that's every positive for the rate of inflation, which I estimate will run only around 5 percent for this year." The inflation rate, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, was 9.1 percent in 1975. Standard Oil (Ohio) and Atlantic Richfield, which hold 19.33 million shares from 22.06 million in the Alaskan pipeline, each fell more than 2 points after a Government official said it was un-rather that compares with an estimated 8.75 percent on accumulated long-term industrial bonds last week. The Conoco debentures will carry an 8 1/2 percent interest rate and be priced at 99 1/2 percent of face value. They are being sold along with 4.5 million shares of Conoco common stock, by an investment banking syndicate headed by Morgan Stanley & Company. A four-manager group led by Salomon Brothers will offer $70 million of 30-year bonds of Long Island Lighting Company at 9 3/4 percent. The bonds are rated A by Moody's and A-1 by S. & P. In other corporate bond developments, the Philadelphia Electric Company said it would sell $100 million of bonds on July 28; the Georgia Power Company registered 2 million shares of preferred stock to raise about $50 million and also $30 million of 30-year bonds of June 30; and Browning-Ferris Industries changed its $40 million 240-year debenture issue to a $40 million eight-year note issue. Tax-exempt Market. In the tax-exempt bond market, price-cutting continued. Illinois bonds due in 1995 that were marketed originally on a price of 102 1/2, for example, at a yield of 5.95 percent traded at a price to yield 6.25 percent yesterday. The Omaha Public Power District announced that it would sell $100 million of revenue bonds June 8 through a group led by Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Company. The total will include about $25 million of serial bonds due 1982-1999 and $21.2 million of 30-year term bonds and $53.8 million of 40-year term bonds. In the foreign bond, Province of Quebec announced plans to sell $100 million of 25-year debentures through a five-member group headed by the First Boston Corporation. FOREIGN BONDS. Among the 30 Dow Industrials, a list dotted with multi-point losses, only one issue showed a gain. That was Allied Chemical, up 1/2 to 37 1/2. Nationwide trading in all issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange dropped to 1 1/2 to 3 1/2, with major interests in the Alaskan pipeline, each fell more than 2 points after a Government official said it was un-

SURGE IN BUYING LIFTS SOYBEANS

Futures Rise by 10c Limit - Wheat and Silver Climb

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER
Heavy local buying, speculative enthusiasm, and a rush of shorts to buy to cover positions combined yesterday to send soybean futures up the daily limit of 10 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade.

In recent weeks, soybean product futures have been led upward in price by soybean meal, in which there has been much foreign-buying demand along with good domestic usage.

July soybean meal closed at $178 a ton, up from $169.80; soybean oil ended at 68.45 cents a pound, up from 65.69 for July delivery.

Speculative zeal managed also to push prices of wheat sharply higher yesterday, with July closing at $3.59 1/2 a bushel, up from $3.45.

Silver futures jumped sharply on the Commodity Exchange.

Maine Potato Futures Defaults Loom

potato area face a decline in potato supplies and a rise in prices. At this time of year supplies are normally moving northward from more Southern producers.

"If the defaulters get off easy," one officer of a leading brokerage house in New York said heatedly, "it will destroy the traditional fabric of the commodity futures trading system."

All spokesmen at the Mercantile Exchange could offer what investigations have been ordered and, as one officer asserted, "those who don't deliver will certainly face severe penalties."

"At this moment we don't know who is responsible and what the punishment will be," he added. "Our position is that all short positions must be covered by 3 P.M. May 25, the day when business in the May 1976 Maine potato futures contract must be settled."

Contract's Price Soared
When posted for trading a year earlier, the contract's price moved from a low of $5.92 a hundred pounds to a high of $19.15 last January, equaling the previous market for Maine potato futures prices set in April 1974. By the time trading ended in the contract on May 7, each contract's 50,000-pound lot was quoted at $8.70 a hundred pounds.

Many brokers attributed the volatile price movements to what they termed "cooked" Department of Agriculture reports on plantings, harvests and consumption figures. Cooked is synonymous with fake in the industry.

"Last fall, for example, Washington said the harvest had been a disaster—that's what we saw $19 spuds in January. Then they said supplies were more than adequate and indicated a glut. Prices fell.

Large Holdings Reported
"The thinking in the trade is that the figures are often in line with the Administration's economic strategy." In any event, the resultant volatile market attracted the big hedgers and speculators such as Jack Richard Simplot, "king of the Idaho potatoes" and developer of dehydrated potatoes in World War II.

According to brokers, it could not be confirmed whether Mr. Simplot's reportedly large holdings of contracts were speculative or were merely hedges against price fluctuations that could affect his holdings.

"No factor in the market as big as Mr. Simplot would allow himself to be trapped," a broker observed. "And if he did blunder into that position, he certainly has the funds to buy out of it."

Under the rules of the Mercantile Exchange, speculators are limited to 150 contracts in any one delivery month, while hedgers may own as many as they can justify by having either inventory or the ability to produce the commodity.

If these limits in the May 1976 delivery were exceeded, the contract holders also face Federal investigation. Normally, those in the trade who have a commodity tend to protect themselves against price declines by going short — selling contracts to deliver. On the other hand, longs buy contracts to deliver to protect themselves against price increases.

Unlike these trade hedgers, speculators buy or sell, in effect, promises to accept or deliver commodities they do not own or have no intention of owning.

One possible way out for those shorts who must deliver 1,677 contracts of 50,000 pounds each, or 83.85 million pounds, this afternoon is a device known as "exchange for product." However, brokers said that they expected very few of these contracts to be settled by this method.

Exchange of product involves finding someone who is willing to accept either cash or potatoes from areas other than Maine, or perhaps certain kinds of potatoes from that state that fall outside the specification of the Mercantile Exchange contract.

In an effort to broaden the narrow terms of the Maine potato futures contract, the Federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission has proposed to change its contract to include supplies from East Coast states as well as Maine by July 1.

"The most powerful element in advertising is the truth"

William Bernbach.

Correct, Mr. Bernbach.

You have always said that great advertising will make a poor product fail faster. It will get more people to try it and find out how bad it is.

Where lesser talent might have sought to disguise or varnish the truth, your artfully arresting messages took the truth and created advertising of enormous potency.

You have paid tribute to the truth by making it provocative with your great talent.

You have demonstrated the power of the truth—and, by your example, created a revolution that has changed the face of advertising.

The truth has always been the essential ingredient in journalistic success. This is true today more so than ever. For never before have so many believed so little.

At The Wall Street Journal, the truth has always been the guiding North Star. Those who write and edit The Journal have stuck to the truth—without regard for whether it would find favor or popular acclaim.

The truth has always been the essential ingredient in The Journal. This is why American leaders rely on The Journal as the prime source of news and information.

That view creates a productive atmosphere for advertising which appears in The Journal. Our 4,600,000 readers are inclined to view advertising in The Journal with the trust, faith, credibility, and willingness to act, is a result of knowing The Journal proves the truth.

That's why Journal advertising works.

When an advertiser cares about results, the truth to remember.

The Wall Street Journal.

Mr. Bernbach, founder with Maxwell Dane and Ned Doyle of Doyle Dane Bernbach Inc., now holds the title of Chief Executive Officer and Chairman of The Executive Committee with the agency. He lives in New York City.

Woolf Accepts Post in Princeton

Harry Woolf, the provost of Johns Hopkins University since 1972, announced yesterday that he had accepted appointment as director of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N.J. The selection, first reported three weeks ago, followed Dr. Woolf's refusal of the presidency of Tufts University in Boston.

He will go to Princeton in the fall to replace Dr. Carl Kayser, who resigned a year ago and who has accepted a professorship at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Dr. Woolf, a University of Chicago graduate with a Ph. D. from Cornell, went to Johns Hopkins from the University of Washington in 1962 to be professor of the history of science.

Aleksandr Machehkin, the Soviet journalist held for 10 days in Tokyo as a possible spy, left for Moscow with his wife and child yesterday by request of the Japanese Government. Mr. Machehkin had been arrested for suspected bribery of an American sailor for military and electronic information.

In Brooklyn, George C. Pratt, longtime counsel to Joseph M. Margiotta, the Nassau County Republican, leader, was sworn in yesterday as a Federal Judge. The 48-year-old Syosset resident replaces Anthony J. Travis, a Brooklyn Democrat, who retired. Mr. Pratt went to Yale from upstate Steuben County, where his late father and great-grandfather served as surrogate judge and his late grandfather was county judge.

Jeanne Martin Cissé, former delegate from Guinea to the United Nations, is her country's new minister of social affairs, replacing Mafory Bangoura, who died in March. Mrs. Cissé, a 50-year-old mother of six, is a former secretary-general of the Pan-African Women's Movement. In 1972 she became the first woman president of the U.N. Security Council.

Issue and Debate

Juvenile Criminals an Increasing Problem

By JOSEPH B. TREASTER

They are smooth-faced, not more than 14 or 15 years old. Yet nothing they see on television is more violent than their daily lives.

They are members of a small army of muggers, stick-up men and purse-snatchers who have beset New York and other cities in the country in the last few years, confounding the police and the courts, terrorizing neighborhoods and creating an intense debate on how to cope with them.

For decades, authorities have dealt with juvenile delinquents as troubled individuals, rather than as criminals. The delinquents have been offered help, but have seldom been punished.

But now, with a tougher, more dangerous delinquent emerging, committing more violent crimes than ever before, it is clear that the old approach is not working.

That fundamental changes are essential seems to be universally accepted. What is at issue, however, is the degree of the change. And these days, a handful of concerned legislators are searching for answers.

On the one hand, there is a group of so-called "hard-liners" urging that 14- and 15-year-olds accused of violent crimes be dealt with in the criminal courts and be sent to adult-style prisons for terms of up to life.

Others, at this end of the spectrum, say that all youths under 16—the demarcation line for juveniles in New York state—should remain within the jurisdiction of the Family Court but that sentences of up to six years should be levied for the most heinous crimes, compared to the present maximum term of 18 months, which is usually shortened to a year or less.

Still others maintain that youths should be tried in the Criminal Court, then returned to Family Court for sentencing of up to five years.

Another group is rallying around a number of more moderate revisions, including one providing for a minimum of one year of detention in secure confinement for a youth found guilty of such violent crimes as murder and rape with at least two more years of supervision either in or out of an institution.

None of the reformers wants to eliminate the basic goal of trying to rehabilitate errant youths, they say. But the steep rise in violence has convinced them that the system must shift away from its original focus on just helping the troubled youths so that some measure of protection can be provided for the community. Generally speaking, the reformers want to impose a standard of accountability on young law-breakers—to make clear to them that they "can't get away with murder." — and this appears to mean, for the first time, establishing punishment as a part of the juvenile justice system.

The Background

The first juvenile court was established in Cook County, Ill., in 1899, rooted in the concept that youngsters who got into trouble ought to be accorded special care and treatment because of their immaturity. Within the next decade or so there were similar courts in all the states.

From the beginning, however, the juvenile justice system was treated as a step-child within city and state governments. It was never adequately financed and, while children were institutionalized separately from adults and interned for periods thought to be relevant to their needs rather than their offenses, efforts at rehabilitation were generally limited.

In the late 1950's and 1960's, there was great concern that the system, however benevolently conceived, was more harmful than helpful to its charges. This set in motion a number of reforms for the protection of the child.

But in the last few years something, still unexplained, has been happening: increasing numbers of youngsters have been turning to violent crime, and the crimes are not just an isolated murder or robbery, but scores of them.

For example, the New York City police say 54 youths under 18 years of age were arrested for murder in the city in 1975; there were 5,278 arrests for robbery and 1,230 were charged with felonious assault. There were also 173 arrests for rape and 125 for sodomy. These youths are often thought to be more dangerous than adults because many of them are unpredictable, easily upset and remorseless.

As a result, the pendulum has begun to swing away from protecting the child and toward protecting society. The two sides in the debate disagree to some extent on this point, however, with those in the moderate camp arguing that harsh treatment of juveniles in adult facilities will not serve the community well but will create a more disturbed person to deal with in later years.

Severe View

Assemblyman Burton G. Hecht, liberal Democrat from the Bronx, who introduced one of the bills that would sent 14- and 15-year-olds charged with violent crimes to the criminal court, argues that Family Court is simply not equipped to deal with these cases.

He recalls a recent study by a state agency that showed that of more than 4,800 youths taken to Family Courts on felony charges only a little more than 4 percent of them were sent to institutions.

According to Senator Donald M. Halperin, Democrat of Brooklyn and chairman of the Democrats' Senate task force on juvenile delinquency, longer incarceration and sentences directly related to the magnitude of the crime would provide a deterrent that does not currently exist.

Both Mr. Hecht and Mr. Halperin see their measures as offering protection to society by removing youths from the community.

Senator Ralph J. Marino, Republican of Oyster Bay, says he favors trying youths accused of violent crimes in the Criminal Court and then having them sentenced by the Family Court and sent to youth facilities for up to five years because of a great "log jam" in the "adjudication process" in the Family Court.

He and the others in this camp feel the proposals for a minimum of one year in secure detention, which have been advanced both by Governor Carey and Assemblyman Richard N. Gottfried, liberal Democrat from Manhattan and chairman of the Assembly's standing committee on child care, are far too lenient.

"One year is not enough time to turn around a kid who's done a major crime," Senator Marino says.

Furthermore, he says, "it's ridiculous to focus on the age of 16. Kids are maturing much earlier now. The determination of maturity should be based on the seriousness of the crime and not an artificial chronological age. A kid who commits rape is not a child."

Moderate View

Mr. Gottfried's more moderate proposal provides a flexibility that he suggests is invaluable in trying to cope with young people. Beyond the initial three years of supervision, his proposal also makes it possible for the state to extend control over the youth for one year at a time until his 21st birthday.

"I don't think you can mandate a specific sentence," he says. "Fourteen and 15-year-old youngsters are going through very rapid changes. No two are at the same point in change. No two of them are moving at the same pace."

He feels strongly that the Family Court and the other elements of the present juvenile justice system can be made to work effectively and has advanced several other proposals, which, as well as tightening up current procedures, would shift the mandate of the court so that it is clearly obligated to consider the safety of the community in its dealing with youths.

Mr. Hecht, on the other hand, says he feels it is "a lot worse" to put a 15-year-old murderer into an institution with 13- and 14-year-olds who have not committed major crimes and "who still may be saved," than to put the older boy into the adult system.

The Outlook

According to a number of legislative sources, the harshest of the proposals—particularly those that would send juveniles into the adult system—appear to be losing ground, partly because it is strongly felt that they would be rejected by the Governor.

At the same time, the proposals put forward by Mr. Gottfried are becoming the focal point of the Legislature. For the last several days, Mr. Gottfried and Mr. Hecht have been negotiating a compromise that is expected to result in the death of Mr. Hecht's plan to send youngsters to the adult system and a toughening of Mr. Gottfried's sentencing proposal.

Just how tough Mr. Gottfried's proposal might become is something he says he would prefer not to discuss.

3 Democrats Make Final Appeals in Oregon

Special to The New York Times

LAND, Ore., May 24—The leading competitors in the Democratic primary—Senator Frank Church, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California and Gov. Jimmy Carter of Oregon—campaigning across today in a last-minute effort to win votes.

Mr. Church, his wife, Bead, and his supporters believe they will win the primary by a narrow margin over Gov. Brown. There will be both a primary and a runoff election for 34 delegates.

The newspaper's poll of 187 voters indicated to some of Mr. Church's supporters that Governor Brown may have been cutting into Mr. Carter's anti-Washington appeal rather than taking voters from Senator Church.

The Senator's aides and supporters were even more confident of a victory because of recent developments, including an endorsement today by Oregon Gov. Robert Straub.

That endorsement was expected to bring many votes to Mr. Church since Governor Straub is a supporter of Senator Church since Governor Straub is a supporter of Senator Church since Governor Straub is a supporter of Senator Church.

an hour behind schedule, but he found a crowd of about 600 persons waiting patiently for him on the courthouse lawn.

Stirred by their enthusiasm, he came close to acknowledging his hope for an upset victory here, where no Presidential write-in campaign has ever before succeeded.

"In three short weeks in Maryland we were able to win an overwhelming victory," he said. "I'd like to try to do the same thing in Oregon."

Later when he landed in the coastal town of Coos Bay, he was greeted by several hundred persons who had been waiting outside in the chilly night air for more than an hour. They listened with rapt attention, protesting good-naturedly when, at 10:30 P.M., after more than a half-hour, the candidate said he would take only a few more questions.

The audiences that Mr. Brown drew around the state seemed to be with him even before he talked to them. Concluding a speech at an outdoor rally of more than 2,000 at South Oregon State College in Ashland, he reminded them to look for the blank space on the ballot where they could write in his name. "The blank space does not represent emptiness," he quipped. "It represents possibility."

The Brown campaign said it will have volunteers at every

of politicians and are looking for what he calls "late runner." Mr. McKinney says he is still undecided but he is strongly inclined to write in "Jerry Brown" for President as a hand does on a blackboard at the end of the Brown commercials that are being shown on television here. His wife thinks she will probably do the same.

Neither Mr. Brown nor Senator Frank Church of Idaho has yet made an impression on Miss Middlebrooks, but the young hospital worker might be receptive if they can reach her before Tuesday, because for she is having similar doubts about Mr. Carter.

In her case, the doubts were planted not by overexposure to the candidate on television but by a lawyer friend who dismissed the Carter campaign themes that had most impressed her. All politicians say those things, her friend said, and she now agrees that she had probably been naive.

Refreshing Candor

It is not that Oregon voters are harder to impress than voters elsewhere. If anything, they are more open to impressions. "But they are wary of being stampeded. Even when they have been impressed, their votes cannot be taken for granted as front-runners before Mr. Carter have discovered.

Bob Sund, a real estate broker, liked Mr. Carter to begin with and likes him now. But when he stepped out on his mother-in-law's porch on a recent evening to chat about the candidates, he said that he and his wife and daughter had just made up their minds to write in Governor Brown's name after seeing a television news clip in which the California said that no form of tax reform could possibly relieve the burden on middle classes.

That rang true and Mr. Sund found the candor refreshing. He doesn't think that Mr. Brown is ready to be President yet but said he would vote for him simply to give him a bigger voice in the Democratic Party. Asked whether he would vote for Mr. Brown if he seemed to have a good chance to win the nomination, Mr. Sund unhesitatingly replied, "In that case, I'd be more for Carter because of his experience."

A few doors down the block, Jean Smith enthusiastically discussed Mr. Brown's appeal. "Jerry Brown is kind of delightful," she said. "He has quite a bit of personality. He's very casual."

But, she hastened to add, there was no chance that she would vote for him or for Mr. Carter whose "Southern voice" puts her off. She had made up her mind, she said, to stay with Representative Morris K. Udall, who has withdrawn from active contention here.

Jack Grohs, a bearded longshoreman, was wearing a Church button on his jersey when he again the first impression could not be taken as a firm "clue" as to where the vote was going. On Senator Church's side was the fact that he comes from Idaho, a neighboring state, but Mr. Grohs said that he was also attracted by Governor Brown's youth.

California Image

On the map, California is also a neighboring state, but Diane Yates, who had come to the door with Mr. Grohs, patiently explained that Oregonians don't see it that way. Idaho is more of a "layman's state," she said, making the point that it had ordinary working people with whom Oregonians could identify. California, it seemed, was synonymous with "flashy lifestyles, high spending and squandered resources."

This contrast emerged regularly in the conversation of voters who were considering Senator Church. His television commercials here end with the slogan: "At last a candidate who makes you want to vote."

Still, among the voters who were giving second or even third thoughts to the candidates, Mr. Brown remained an object of fascination. Joe Lauritzen, an electrician, said, "Younger people are more tuned in." And Laurie Golden, a certified public accountant, said, "I'm ready for something different."

Besides, she added, "I've never written anybody in ever before in my life and I thought maybe this was a good time to do it."

The firmest vote for Mr. Carter came from Philip Kraushaar, an organ salesman whose stereo system was blaring rock music. Like Mr. Carter, the young man said, he had experienced Christian "rebirth."

"I believe he's serious in his convictions about Christ," Mr. Kraushaar said. "You don't say those things and open yourself up to ridicule unless you are serious. I believe in God's guidance and I know that an instrument yielded to God is a lot more likely to do good for this world."

Sportswear: A Passport to Fall Fashion

By BERNADINE MORRIS

"Sportswear" is the code word for fashion these days. The umbrella term, embracing such standard categories as coats, suits and dresses, serves as "chic," "elegant" or "architectural" did in other times.

It has two important connotations: it implies a casual approach, even to evening clothes, and it most often involves pieces of apparel—separates—that can be put together in different ways. When the basic piece is a dress, it can be combined with varied jackets or coats, worn over a sweater or shirt or even pants.

This flexibility, plus an innate easiness of fit, characterizes much of the new designs offered for next fall, even when the designer considers himself predominantly a maker of dresses, coats, suits or that rarefied category known as "couture" clothes.

It is another sign of fashion rising upward, instead of percolating down, since sportswear—apart from golf, tennis, riding and beach clothes—was a Depression-born concept, arising from the fact that women could get more mileage out of a couple of blouses and a skirt than they could out of a dress.

A sampling:
Pauline Toot: Pauline Trigère, whose clothes are as close to "couture" as made-to-order styles can be, added a special division of man-tailored suits in the spring. Made by Sussex, a manufacturer of men's clothes, the fall edition includes satin-lapelled black wool designs that the producers call "tuxedos." They mean the styles can be worn to cocktail as well as dinner parties.

Selling as Separates
Like the daytime ones, in worsteds or gray flannel, they involve vests, skirts or pants as well as jackets.

The sportswear angle: a number of stores, such as Martha's, are selling the styles as separates, so a woman can order either pants or a skirt, or both. Jackets start at $280.

Victor Joris for Cuddleeat: Mr. Joris has gone a long way from his stand as a coat specialist. The most acclaimed styles at his recent showing happened to be the silk shirts, available in 20 colors, and modeled, simply, with gray flannel skirts.

The shirts and skirts were presented without other trappings, "because that's the way people wear them," the designer explained. The price is also noteworthy: $90.

Of course, there are other things. Coats, for instance. They tend to be the casual, durtel variety, which pair up with knickers, long pants and so on. Other coats are embroidered with braid and have peasant overtones.

Mr. Joris generally has broken away from the strictly tailored line for which he has been known and does many softer styles, such as battlejackets gathered on a drawstring, or tunics, split at the sides. It's the direction Saint Laurent embarked on in Paris, and Mr. Joris feels he's on the right track.

Ilie Wacs: Another coat and suit designer—he left Originala a couple of seasons ago to start his own company—Mr. Wacs is today involved with ponchos, raincoats in quilted nylon, coats made out of blankets and tunics worn over pants.

Occasionally, he throws in a tailored pants suit and the kind of reefer coat girls in finishing school wore before they all went into blue jeans. Jumpsuits and chopped-off trousers are casually contemporary.

Danielle by Don Simonelli: Mr. Simonelli left the coat and suit area sooner than most and for about a decade has been toying with sportswear. In his current collection, he's totally immersed in it. In the classic manner, he designs separates that not only match but blend or contrast.

A district check blazer teams up with gabardine pants or wide-wale corduroy ones. Either way, a paisley vest adds a spot of color. An extensive group of plaid styles, including this season's obligatory knit, can be offset by velvet tops or bottoms.

Hooded ponchos, drawstring jackets and riding jackets turn up in various fabrics.
Clovis Ruffin: This designer started off in the hippie era making T-shirt dresses when everybody else was making pants. He's still making simple dresses—many of them are boldly striped—but he's making pants too. Often, they peep from under knee-length tunics and they have a simple coat or a big scarf to go with them.

Supple is the word for Ruffin's designs. Jersey is a favorite fabric and everything moves. It's his version of sportswear.

Layering the Knits
Adri: One of the most original designers, Adri is devoting herself to interchangeable knitted pieces. You pile them on, tabard over pants, pullover over top of tabard, loose coat over everything. She has divided her pieces into such categories as "basic sweaters," "coverups" (smocks and cardigans), "extras" (hoods, hats).

The combinations are limitless, the yarns and colors individual, and this is sportswear carried to its natural conclusion.

The next step: Sportswear ranked high in the entries submitted by some 1,300 design students from all over the country in a competition sponsored by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Top prize, a 10-week job at Friedricks, was won by Julie Ballantyne, owner of a master of fine arts degree at Texas Christian University, who arrived there from the Glasgow School of Art in her native Scotland.

Some 6,500 sketches were considered in the competition, according to Wilbur Daniels, a union executive.

What was a union doing sponsoring a design contest?
"Ours is an industry which depends for its economic health on the flow of new ideas," Mr. Daniels said. Besides Miss Ballantyne's, some 30 awards were announced at a ceremony at the Tower Suite the other day. The prizes ranged from $50 bonds to $500 checks. The winning entries indicated that the talent was indeed flowing.

"Sometimes they don't talk properly to the plants." Mrs. Goldenzweig is a firm believer in the power of a few kind words or some music. At home, she says, "We say nice things to the plants. We thank them for the flowers they gave us."

In the winter, when some of the plants from her home garden are brought indoors, she said they flourish within pistol-shot of the classical music from her husband's studio.

Mrs. Goldenzweig, who has been with Grey Advertising for six years, said the plant collection began a few years ago when she brought in "a little pot with a flower" from a neighborhood store. Little by little, the collection grew. One of Mrs. Goldenzweig's colleagues brought in some. "Now everybody brings their own plants." And an unidentified boss gave permission to put some of them on an unused desk and table, Mrs. Goldenzweig said.

The doctoring began one day when a colleague brought a purple passion from home. "It was so droopy, I transplanted it to a new pot," Mrs. Goldenzweig recalled. "I put in new soil. I let it stay out of the sun for a few days. And then I put it back in the sun. It did beautifully." For Virginia Goldenzweig, there may be no fancy scalpel-work by candlelight to the rataplán of drums. But from those she helps, there are the customary rewards of gratitude and reverence accorded the most legendary of jungle doctors. "They always thank me, and they call me the plant doctor. And they kiss me. And when I go around with my scissors to do cutting, they say, 'Here comes the surgeon.'"

Jewelry With Rhythm, and Sound

By RUTH ROBINSON

Sound and movement are important to Joanne Cooper, a painter who has carried over the rhythms of her figurative impressionism to the medium of jewelry. As the wearer moves, some of her bold silver and vermeil ornaments, particularly leaf necklaces and chokers, tinkle like wind chimes in the breeze.

Ariene Francis liked one of them so much when she modeled it at a celebrity fashion show for charity that she purchased it then and there. She was fascinated by the fact that each leaf was different.

Actually, the leaves are identical when Miss Cooper cuts them from a thin sheet of silver. However, she doesn't get her effects by hammering and chasing them as did the ancients, but fires the rolled edges, determining the form by the way she holds the torch. Sometimes she ornaments a leaf with a cabochon garnet or a raw mineral of some sort, but never with a faceted stone. That would be out of character.

She also does simple sculptural chokers, bracelets, rings, earrings and pendants that can be worn as belts and vice versa, such as the silver breast plate on heavy cord that looks like a modish little pocketbook when worn at the waist although it won't hold anything.

Her jewelry, which ranges from $20 for a small mushroom pendant to $440 for a lotus choker, is available at the Kruger Van Eerde Gallery, 842 Madison Avenue near 69th Street; Amulets and Talismans, 33 Christopher Street; Saks Fifth Avenue, and Off Broadway, 139 West 72d Street.

Julius Erving of the New York Nets arrived 30 minutes late and Larry Robinson of the Montreal Canadiens was 30 minutes early yesterday to receive the Sport Magazine-American Motors Company Most Valuable Player awards for the American Basketball Association and National Hockey League playoff finals.

Julius Erving of the Nets and Larry Robinson of the Canadiens outside the Plaza Hotel yesterday.

Erving, who had a brilliant series against the Denver Nuggets, led both teams, averaging 39 points and 13 rebounds a game. Robinson, the aggressive defenseman of the Canadiens, said he was as surprised over his selection as he was over the Canadiens four-game sweep of the Philadelphia Flyers.

Erving, who was forced to drive to New York in his own car when the limousine from Sport Magazine went to the wrong address, also received the N.V.P. award in 1974 after he led the Nets to the championship over the Utah Stars.

Erving was the only unanimous choice to the A.B.A. all-star team that was announced by Dave DeBuschere, the league commissioner. The other starters were Billy Knight of Indiana, Artis Gilmore of Kentucky, Ralph Simpson of Denver and James Silas of San Antonio.

Wood, Field and Stream: Beaverkill Reflects

By NELSON BRYANT Special to The New York Times ROSCOE, N.Y.—A difficulty in staying at Doug Bury's Antrim Lodge when fishing the Beaverkill, the Willowemoc or the east branch of the Delaware is that the faces of friends surface out of the crowd in the main dining room-like Mayflies on a trout stream.

54 degrees, and all the time I was casting to the reluctant trout I was wondering whether the shad had moved upstream from the salt water into the big pool on the east branch, just downstream of the town of that name.

Armed with one shad fly, tied by Walt Dette of Roscoe and given to me a few hours before by Bob Thulin of Franklin Lakes, N.J., whom I had met at the fly-tying shop of Harry Darbee of Roscoe, I went to the shad pool. Red-winged blackbirds clamored from riverside bushes, the trucks of large and small deer were in the mud, mergansers flew up and down the stream. The water temperature was 50 degrees and no shad were visible when I began to work the tail end of the pool. Leaving the tail, I went to the pool's head, but in neither place did I see or hook a shad.

I retreated to the shore and filled my pipe, and to say that content mine. Such was not however, I was not I have been many fore, that there are what being along stream, beach or fills one with a laise. One long for of similar p with whom to sights and sounds ural world. Few men can be for long.

Baeza Found; Faces Inquiry

By GERALD ESKENAZI
Baeza, one of the top jockeys, was reported to have a good health yesterday, his wife had told he was missing.

Braulio Baeza

Baeza led United States riders in purses won last year, but his reputation had sagged recently. He was embarrassed before the Kentucky Derby when the trainer of Honest Pleasure, LeRoy Jolley, hesitated in naming him to ride the colt. Honest Pleasure lost as the favorite, and was also beaten in the Freshness.

ture doesn't show up, it leads to brushfire-like rumors in the "backstretch," the stable area. Baeza's absence came into focus last Saturday when he did not appear to ride Optimistic Gal, trained by Jolley and favored in the $35,630 Acorn Stakes. Although he is

Ali Knocks Down Dunn Five Times, Wins in Fifth Round to Retain Title

By MICHAEL KATZ

MUNICH, West Germany, Tuesday, May 25—Richard Dunn, who dreamed he would win the world heavyweight championship from Muhammad Ali this morning, can sleep well even if dreams don't always come true. Dunn, a 9-to-1 underdog in his English homeland, was knocked down five times by Ali before the fight was stopped after 2 minutes 2 seconds of the fifth round. But five times Dunn got up and he still wanted to fight when the referee stopped the bout. The Englishman was up at the count after the last knockdown, but he staggered into the ropes, not knowing where he was.

Muhammad Ali and the karate expert he hired demonstrate special punch the heavyweight champion planned to use to defend his title against Richard Dunn, the English challenger, in Olympiahalle in Munich, West Germany.

Ali knew where he was. He was in a slugfest, the kind Dunn dreamed would lead to an Englishman holding the heavyweight title for the first time since 1899. "It was the Jack Dempsey-Firpo fight," said Dunn. "I had seen films of that fight and kept dreaming it over and over, where Firpo knocks Dempsey out of the ring."

last," and he began the fight on his toes. Dunn, a red haired, left-hander whom Ali was calling "Frankenstein," came to fight. The 6-foot-3-inch Englishman, who had said, "I've got to live with myself afterward," charged into Ali.

the Englishman. But Dunn, who has been knocked out nine times and whose jaw is as large a target as an aircraft-carrier deck, fought back gamely. Ali ended the round with another flurry and was ahead, two rounds to none.

Still, Dunn showed no respect. While waiting for the third-round bell, he stood in his corner looking across the ring with disdain at Ali.

Dunn, however, beckoned Ali to come and fight at the start of the fifth round and his dream of a Dempsey-Firpo match seemed to bear a resemblance to the mad page the two men were fighting at.

instincts. Some baseball players have them, some But the really good ones usually have them from beginning and Willie Randolph keeps displaying the instincts, off the field as well as on. After the 7-6 Boston Red Sox on Sunday, the New York Yankees' rookie second baseman walked over to the locker room and consoled the rookie center fielder who had been blinded by the sun on a short fly ball that was an embarrassing error. Willie Randolph didn't realize that Billy Martin had noticed his thoughtful-ness. "He's a winner," the manager mentioned later. "That's the type of thing that a winner does." That's also the type of thing that an experienced player does, not a rookie.

from the Pittsburgh Pirates in a trade for Doc Medich. Within a week, Billy Martin was convinced. "That kid," the manager told Gabe Paul, the Yankee president who had made the trade, "is everything the scouts said he was."

Willie Randolph also speaks easily about being the oldie to have his name on the All-Star Game ballot seven years since the voting was returned to the other rookies had to get their votes as write-in's nice," he said. "But I'm not starry-eyed about it. I remember voting as a kid for Rod Carew in the an League and for Joe Morgan or Dave Cash in lional League."

Church's Venture Into Tourney a Hit

By GORDON S. WHITE JR.
If at first you do succeed, it's a great feeling. That was the reaction of one official after the Ladies Professional Golf Association '76 Classic ended at the Forsgate Country Club Sunday with an exciting one-stroke victory by Amy Alcott. Rately has such a charity tournament been so successful on its first attempt. In this case the sponsoring Roman Catholic Diocese of Trenton was delighted to have the biggest crowds in the history of the L.P.G.A.'s three-day tournament format. This was the first time a church had promoted and sponsored a golf tour event. The women responded with their second tournament in two weeks to be settled on the final green.
